-The fashion authorities tell us that the fancy for cream, ecru and ivory tints still continues in high favor, and spring importations present a great variety of the favorite shades. These colors are equally becoming to blondes and brunettes, and this is doubtless one reason why the fashion retains its power to please for so long a time. Ecru means simply unbleached, and the color in-cludes a multitude of shades. Soft wool materials, such as vigognes and cashmeres, are displayed in lovely eeru tints, varying from cream-color to delica'e yellow or tea-rese. These are in-tended for polonaise over-dresses, to be worn with black velvet or brown skirts. The trimming must be of ecru cashmere we lose in fruit by the recent snow is lace. This lace is now produced in the amply made up for in the improved most elaborate patterns, in imitation of the richest old point. A soft and pretty style of lace is among the new importa-tions, made of cream-colored silk and wrought by hand. Valenciennes lace is also in favor, but to make it available it must assume the fashionable color. This can be produced by dipping it in strong tea or weaker coffee. Costly old laces, yellow with age, are the hight of the fashion, and the possessors of these precious heitlooms should improve the opportunity to display them. So great the rage for this new color, that French milliners are dyeing all their feathers ecru, and the whole head-gear of woman threatens to be unbleached.

Levy and the St. Patrick's Church Choir.

EDITORS APPEAL-Mr. Emile Levy is deserving special credit for the very excellent music St. Patrick's church choir of late has been furnishing for the regular church goer. On last Sunday Mercadante's mass for three voices was sung, and the parts assigned to Mrs. Tomiinson, Mrs. Moyston and Mr. Bornemann. We remember, years ago, when the talented Leo Wheat was organist of St. Lazarus church, to have heard Mrs. Tomlinson sing in that very difficult and beautiful credo of Mercadante's mass, as arranged for a Te Deum of the Episcopal church. Now, as then, Mrs. Tomlinson is the same finished scholar and vocalist, of whom, for the sake of rapid advancement of true music, we should have many like her. Mrs. Tomlinson, for offertory, sang Gunoud's ever-surviving Ave Marie with beautiful effect, assisted by a good organist and the true flute accompaniment of Mr. Tomlinson. Mrs. Moyston is a very clever and sweet singer, ever on time entered by burglars from the private and in place. She executed her part with great credit. Mr. Bornemann sang his part as Bornemann only can sing it. ing an entrance by boring through the | Too much cannot be said of his superiorlty as one of the very best basso singers living in this part of the country. of clothing of small-sizes, and valued at about one hundred dollars. They got ance to the proficient choir. His flute accompaniments to an organ not altegether as good and large as destrable for a large church, and especially the musical services of the Catholic church, is clearly felt, and proves a handsome addition to the musical exercises. With such talent in his choir, Mr. Emile Levy must steadily add to his already splendid reputation as one of our best musicians and rising organists. By request of many, Mercadante's mass for three volces and Gunoud's Ave Marie for soprano will be repeated on Sunday next, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon Couldn't our energetic Levy get his choir to sing some of the latteriy-written sacred works of Rossini, one of which was so beautifully sung here two years ago at a sacred concert given by the Brignoii and Mrs. States concertroupe? With Mrs. Tomlinson in his choir, no soprana part is too difficult for her to render, and surely Mr. Bornemann is the very Formes himself to carry out his own part.
